toing
BY SWIGGY

Toing Brand Audit

Content-
What's working
what's meh and
what I'd pitch tomorrow

By Kanishk Trikha

toing BY SWIGGY

Brand Snapshot

Brand: Swiggy's value food delivery app. Offline prices, online convenience, no surge fees.

Audience: Students, young professionals, gig workers, price consious people, late-night snackers and anyone who skipped delivery because the bill felt too high.

Insight: They respond to low prices, drool-worthy visuals and instant offers.

The play: Brand decoupling. Swiggy felt pricey, so instead of discounting it, they built a new identity with zero premium baggage. The goal is new demand, not stolen share.

₹29

starting meal price

<₹99

most meals

~300K

Instagram followers

Where toing shows up

Instagram

Ad: Sponsored feed ads
Tone: Premium food visuals + loud colours for instant appetite appeal

WhatsApp

Ad: Promo broadcasts
Tone: Personal, chatty and offer-led ("Contemplating every rupee, Chaitali?")

Snapchat

Ad: Full-screen First Snap + Stories
Tone: Offer-led, built for instant purchase with an Order Now CTA

Key insight

Same offer, reshaped for how each platform is actually used

What's working and nailing

Gen Z meme reels

Funny, relatable reels that feel native to the feed.
~300K followers says the audience approves

Price is the headline

₹29 pizza, ₹49 lassi, ₹69 rolls. The Price number is the hook and nobody has to think twice before downloading and ordering.

Green that builds trust

Bold green + pink everywhere, and clearly not Swiggy orange, so no premium baggage.

Clear seperation from Swiggy separate value-focused identity rather than simply making the main Swiggy brand look cheaper

Copy with personality, not just a price tag

Vibrant feed- funny, meme-led, culturally aware and unapologetically Gen-Z

Also nailing: Bold stunts that travel online

Cardboard billboard, Delhi

Handwritten, cheapest-looking billboard, dropped right when big apps hiked fees. Timing beat budget.

Currency kite, Ahmedabad

"Don't waste money. Order from toing." A hyperlocal festival moment carrying the whole brand promise.

Single's Day Adult ads

Marketing on Valentine's Day using double-meaning adult visuals.

Meh #1: the feed has no brand identity

Could be anyone's page- needs more 'Toing-ness'

The grid is people eating on camera. Barely any toing pink or green, so a scroller can't tell whose page it is.
Swish has created stronger visual consistency through its colours, typography, layouts and overall feed treatment. The individual posts still feel like part of one recognisable brand universe.

Reels, reels, reels

Right now, the content can sometimes feel like a collection of funny posts rather than one cohesive brand world. One static post (the zodiac drink combo) in the whole view. Reels are funny but cluttered. Fix: Go 50:50 with carousels and memes, like Swish and Noice. They get saved and shared in DMs.

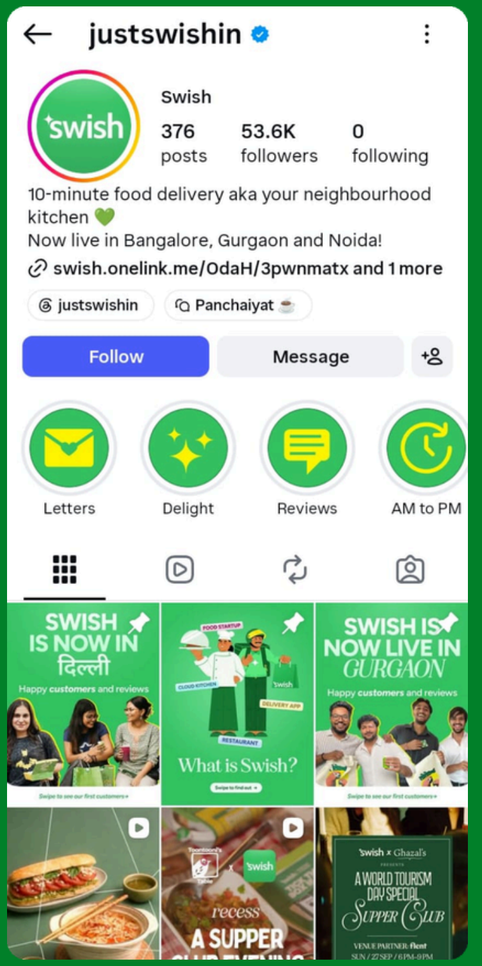

No highlights at all

Swish has branded covers for Letters, Delight, Reviews and AM to PM. toing has nothing. Fix: Branded highlights: ₹29 menu, Offers, Reviews, How it works.

Toing ❌

Swish ✅

Meh #2: the messaging

Meh	Better
Lots of creators, no one face Many one-off influencer collabs, nobody who "is" toing.	One recurring brand face or ambassador, with other creators orbiting around them.
Edgy buzz with a ceiling Pune's double-meaning visuals got people talking, but crude can turn off parents and colleges.	Stay cheeky, not crude. Every stunt should sound like the same toing character.
Remembered for discounts, not personality Anyone can match a ₹29 deal. Right now there's no character behind the price.	Build a brand personality: a consistent voice and recurring characters, so toing is remembered beyond discounts.

Meh #3: the ad people complained about

What happened

- The "Toing Cares" ad on X opens with a woman screaming "Bachao! Bachao!"
- It autoplayed late at night and a linkedin user's family genuinely thought someone nearby was in danger
- They hit "Not interested" and it still showed up every 5 to 10 minutes
- They called it out in a public post

Not every advertisement needs to grab your attention by frightening you

I've been getting the Toing Toing Cares advertisement on X repeatedly for the past several days. The ad starts abruptly with a woman screaming "Bachao! Bachao!"

I was scrolling through my feed late at night when the ad suddenly played. Everyone at home got scared and genuinely thought that someone nearby was in danger. For a few seconds, it created unnecessary panic before we realized it was just an advertisement.

What makes it even more frustrating is that I had already selected "Not interested in this ad", yet the same advertisement continues to appear every 5–10 minutes.

I understand that advertising is about grabbing attention, and a strong hook can certainly make an ad memorable. But there is a difference between capturing attention and causing unnecessary fear or panic, especially when the ad uses an emergency-like scream without warning.

Whoever came up with this creative idea may have intended it to be innovative or attention-grabbing, but I genuinely feel this execution needs to be reconsidered.

Advertising should make people curious about a product—not make people at home wonder "Who is in danger?"

Hopefully, the concerned team takes this feedback seriously and considers a less disturbing way to get viewers' attention.

#Advertising #DigitalMarketing #UserExperience #Marketing

The linkedin User's complaint

How to fix it

Surprise, don't scare
Hook with humour or a twist. No distress screams.

Respect "Not interested"
Frequency caps and proper exclusions.

Think about context
Sound-on autoplay at midnight lands differently.

Listen and reply fast
Social listening to catch posts like this and respond publicly.

toing BY SWIGGY

PITCH 1 OF 3

Sibling Rivalry

Swiggy vs toing: same family, different wallets

People already argue "Swiggy vs toing". Turn it into a running comedy series: Swiggy is the elder sibling with expensive taste, toing is the broke but smart younger one.

Meme carousels

"Ordering on Swiggy vs ordering on toing"

Comment banter

The two handles roasting each other in the comments

Month-end reels

1st of the month = Swiggy, 25th = toing Broke Days

toing BY SWIGGY

PITCH 2 OF 3

Rider's Pick

The people who deliver toing, eat toing

toing's delivery partners are part of its audience. A weekly series where riders share their go-to meals under ₹99, their food hacks and a slice of their day, told with respect and swag.

Rider's Pick reels

One rider, one favourite meal, price on screen. 15 seconds.

Rider-approved menu

City-wise carousels of the best picks under ₹99

One for the rider

Every 10 Rider's Pick orders buys a rider a free meal

toing BY SWIGGY

PITCH 3 OF 3

The Broke Bestie

ft. Akanksha Choudhary or Gayu's Kitchen

Give toing the one recurring face it's missing. Akanksha Choudhary (Splitsvilla, Lock Upp) plays toing's broke bestie, the friend who always knows the cheapest good meal. Gayu's Kitchen drops in for hostel mess episodes.
Not mega celebs, they feels real, have a loyal young audience, would cost less and fits a non-premium brand.

Month-end diaries

Akanksha's quirky "rent paid, ₹300 left" reels, saved by toing

Mess vs ₹29

Gayu's Kitchen rates today's mess menu against a toing order

toing-Villa

Splitsvilla-style challenge: survive a week on a ₹500 toing budget, fans vote in stories

toing BY SWIGGY

Thanks for reading!